

M. James Kondo
Vice Chairman and President, Health Policy Institute Japan

James is the Vice Chairman and President of Health Policy Institute Japan - the first truly independent health policy think-tank in Japan. The Institute focuses on Japanese healthcare reform, G8 global health policies, and public/patient engagement in health policy.

He is also a Founder of TABLE FOR TWO - a World Economic Forum affiliated social venture that seeks to simultaneously address hunger in developing countries and obesity in developed countries. TABLE FOR TWO has chapters in Japan, India, the U.S., and Italy.

James was on the faculty of the University of Tokyo for six years. He was also a consultant at McKinsey & Company for fifteen years where he specialized in economic policy and strategy formulation. He also serves on the board of various non-profits and corporations.

For his work in the policy arena, James was selected a Young Global Leader in 2005 by the World Economic Forum (Davos) and a Yale World Fellow in 2008.

James is a graduate of Harvard Business School and Keio University.

Recent publications:

“Italian G8 Summit: a critical juncture for global health”

(The Lancet, February 14, 2009)

“Japan as the catalyst for improving global public health”

(The Japan Times, February 12, 2009)

“Billing Catch-22 traps patients”

(The Japan Times, January 11, 2008)

“The iron triangle of Japanese healthcare”

(British Medical Journal, 2005; 330; 55-56)